(TEXT, BULLETS, CONTENT ETC.)

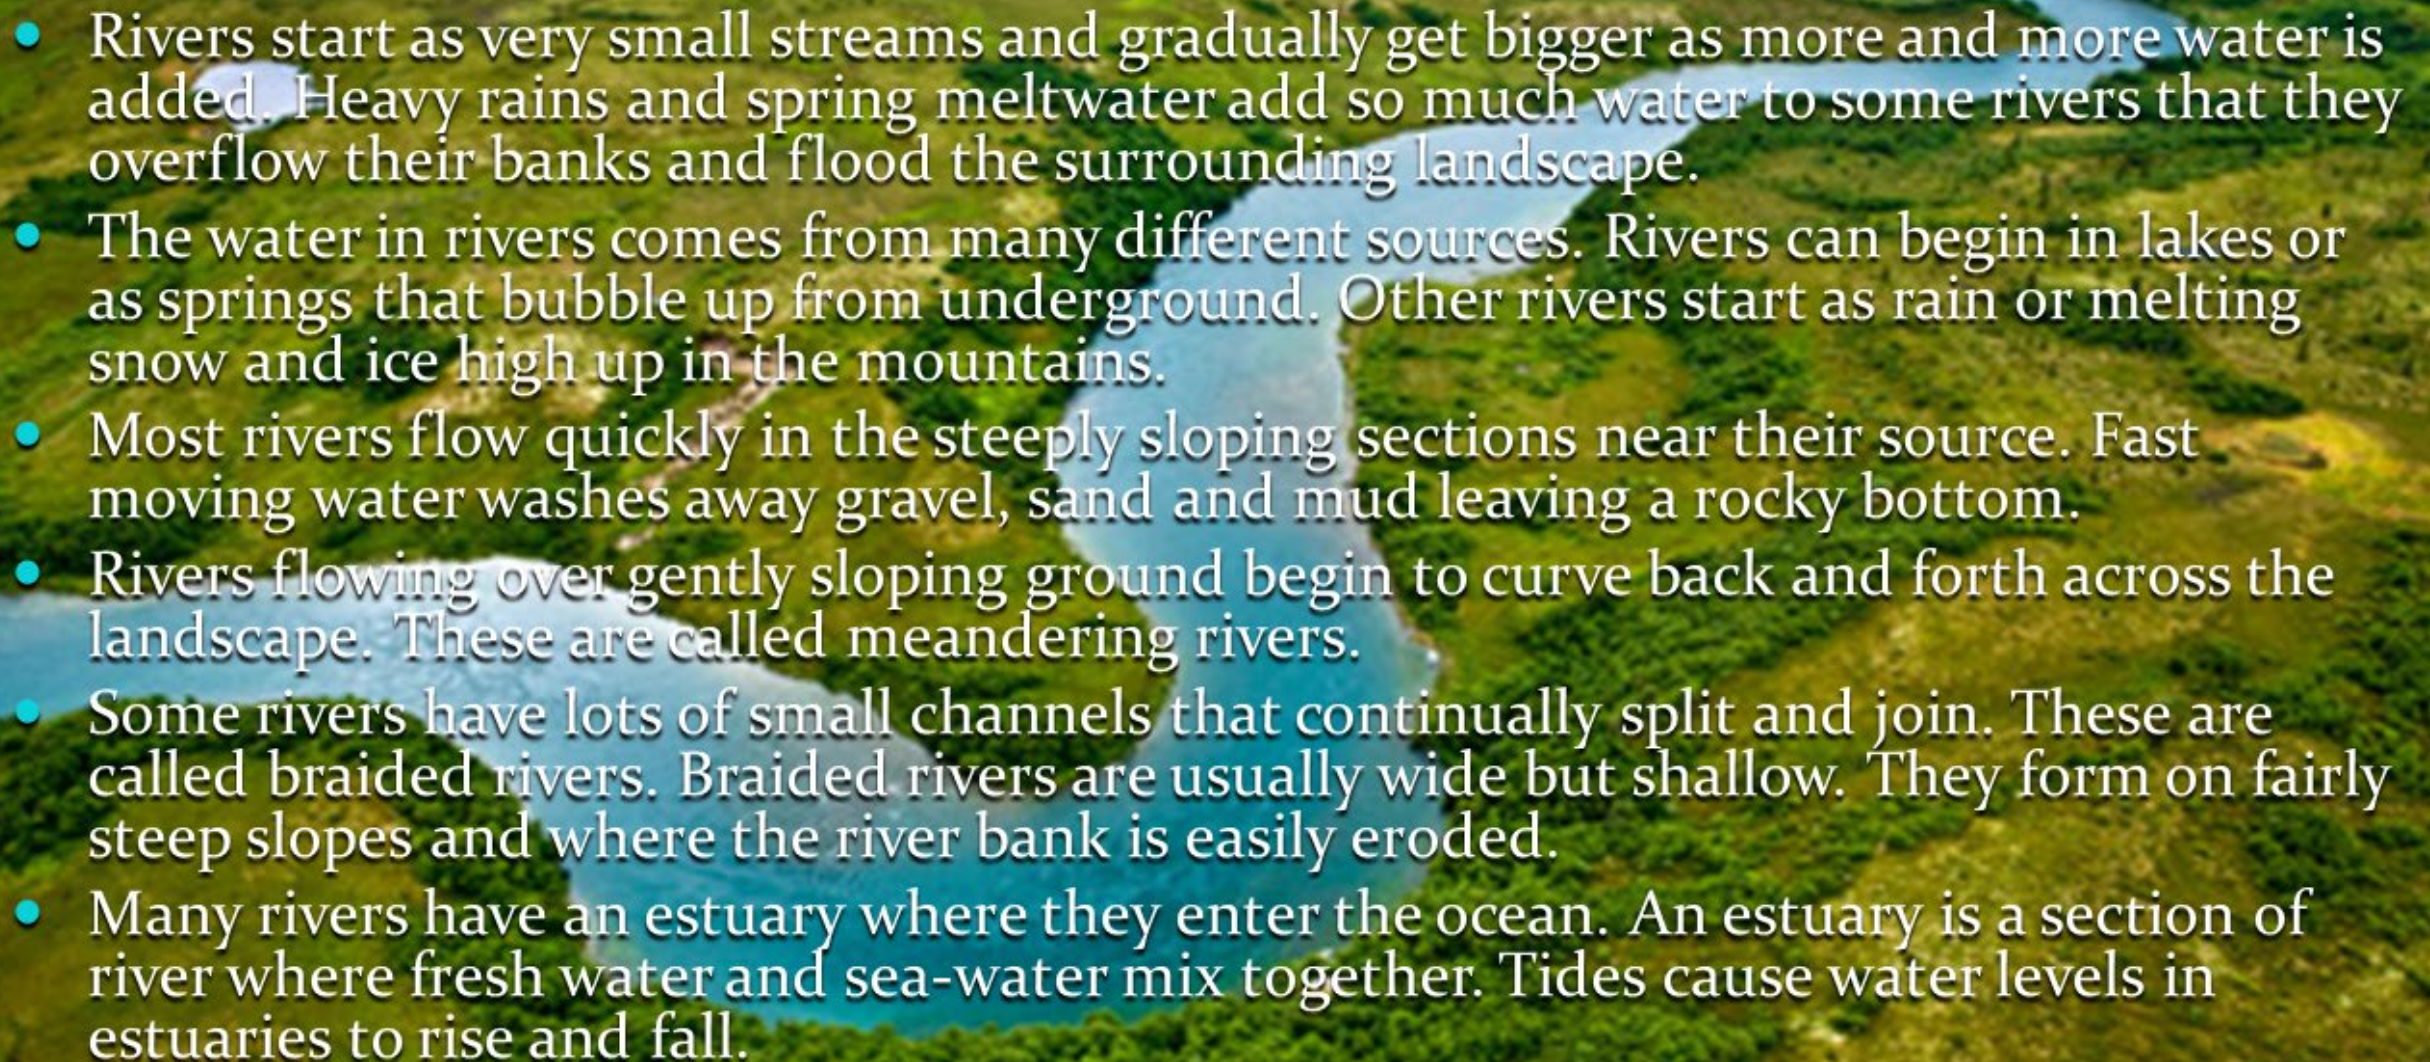

A full-frame image of a galaxy with a prominent central black hole. The galaxy's spiral arms are composed of billions of stars, appearing as a dense field of white, blue, and orange dots against a dark background. The central region is a deep, circular void, representing the event horizon of the black hole. The text "JUNK CREATES ITS OWN GRAVITY" is centered within this void in a white, hand-drawn, sans-serif font. The overall effect is one of cosmic scale and gravitational pull.

IT Modernization Roadmap

How Rivers Are Formed

- An aerial photograph showing a river meandering through a lush green landscape. The river flows from the top right towards the bottom left, curving back and forth. The surrounding land is covered in dense green vegetation, with some lighter green patches indicating different types of plants or perhaps a marshy area. The river's path is clearly visible as a blue line against the green background.
- Rivers start as very small streams and gradually get bigger as more and more water is added. Heavy rains and spring meltwater add so much water to some rivers that they overflow their banks and flood the surrounding landscape.
 - The water in rivers comes from many different sources. Rivers can begin in lakes or as springs that bubble up from underground. Other rivers start as rain or melting snow and ice high up in the mountains.
 - Most rivers flow quickly in the steeply sloping sections near their source. Fast moving water washes away gravel, sand and mud leaving a rocky bottom.
 - Rivers flowing over gently sloping ground begin to curve back and forth across the landscape. These are called meandering rivers.
 - Some rivers have lots of small channels that continually split and join. These are called braided rivers. Braided rivers are usually wide but shallow. They form on fairly steep slopes and where the river bank is easily eroded.
 - Many rivers have an estuary where they enter the ocean. An estuary is a section of river where fresh water and sea-water mix together. Tides cause water levels in estuaries to rise and fall.

STAGE MANAGEMENT

The image shows a detailed wooden stage set, likely from a historical or theatrical production. The set features a large, ornate wooden structure with a gabled roof and a central stage area. The stage is flanked by two large, red, marble-like columns with gold-colored capitals. The background is a dark, textured wall. The floor is made of wooden planks. On the left and right sides, there are wooden balconies or galleries with railings. The overall style is historical and theatrical.
